

Grocery Store Branch SWAG Guide

Purpose

SWAG should support a meaningful conversation, not replace one. The goal is to connect with shoppers first, then use a small gift as a thank you or as an invitation to visit the branch.

How to Use SWAG

Start with a conversation

Approach shoppers naturally with a friendly greeting. Ask a simple question, listen, and engage in a genuine conversation. The interaction should always come before offering any SWAG.

Use SWAG as a thank you

After a positive conversation, offer the item as a small gesture of appreciation.

Example: “Thank you for stopping and chatting with me today. I would love for you to have this small gift.”

Use SWAG to invite them back to the branch

If you are walking in the aisles, do not give the item immediately. Instead, use it as an invitation to visit the branch before they leave the store.

Example: “It was nice meeting you today. If you stop by the branch before you leave, we have a small gift waiting for you.”

Make it personal

Hand the item directly to the shopper and thank them. A short personal comment makes the interaction feel genuine and memorable.

Be intentional

SWAG should never feel like random giveaways. Use it thoughtfully after a meaningful interaction so it becomes a reminder of a positive experience and encourages shoppers to visit the branch.

SWAG is most effective when it follows a genuine connection, not when it replaces one. Every interaction is an opportunity to build trust, create a positive experience, and leave a lasting impression. When used with intention, a simple item becomes more than a giveaway. It becomes a reminder of a meaningful conversation and a reason for shoppers to return. Focus on the relationship first and let the SWAG reinforce the experience.
